KANHA EARTH LODGE

An Overview

Kanha Earth Lodge is spread in a forested area of 16 acres adjoining the buffer zone of Kanha in a small tribal hamlet. The lodge architecture has been inspired by the Gond tribal villages situated on the fringes of Kanha. The lodge has been built with eco-sensitivity, local village cooperation and with an eye on good wilderness experience. It is situated at the Kisli / Khatiya side of the National park. The Lodge is owned and managed by the same people who run King's Lodge, Bandhavgarh, Tree house Bandhavgarh and Ken River Lodge, Panna.

How and where to use this property for your clients

This is a boutique property which should be used for FIT's and small groups. The property is 9.5 kms from the park gate and is quite peaceful.

Who Should Stay?

The property is good for up-market individual travellers. It is recommended for clients who like seclusion and being amidst forest surroundings.

Who should not stay?

Budget clients will find the property expensive. Clients also need to be pre-informed that the driving time from the resort to the park gate is 25-30 minutes one way. Being closer to the Kisli gate, it allows access to the main Kanha zone much quickly than from the Mukhi side.

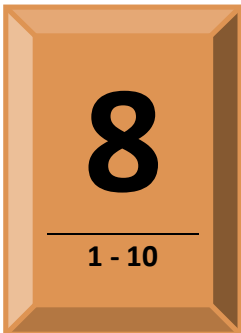

Best Time to Visit

15th October to 30th June is the best time to visit.

Climate

Summer - Max 44 °C, Min 26 °C; Winter - Max 25 °C Min 5 °C.

Our Comments

This lodge is recommended by Travel Inn.

However as this is around 20 minutes drive from the park it should be of interest to those travellers who are looking for seclusion while living in a natural forest setting.

Our team led by our M.D. Mr. Ravi Kalra have personally stayed at the Lodge in the month of June 2010. According to our team, the resort would appeal to wildlife enthusiasts. It is unlikely to attract short stay clients. All the facilities are very much in place and the Lodge should see good season ahead. One of the strength of the Lodge is its in house naturalists.
